CATTLE CASTLE

The Cattle Castle has been given a new name and a new lease on life.

City Council established its intention to designate the building as heritage under the Ontario Heritage Act and in so doing decided to change the name back to the original "Aberdeen Pavilion".

The building was constructed in 1898 for the Central Canada Exhibition Association. It was the first building in Ottawa to have a steel frame without columns to support the roof.

The City will conduct a study to investigate costs of maintenance and possible uses for the building.

136 BAY STREET

The Clegg House is in the news again. The City of Ottawa Heritage Advisory Committee (LACAC) voted to recommend designation of the entire area at Sparks and Bay Streets which includes 136 Bay Street.

Last month, City Council designated the house under the provisions of the Ontario Heritage Act. It is the hope of Heritage Ottawa that Council's double designation will encourage the St. Peter's Church elders, who own the property, not to tear it down after the 180-day limit expires on the individual heritage designation.

The Clegg House is estimated to have been built circa 1865 for Capt. William T. Clegg, Royal Engineer, and Assistant in the route selection for the Rideau Canal.

Capt. Clegg rented the property to Gustavus William Wicksteed, Barrister and Chief Law Clerk, House of Commons. The house was also once occupied by Louis W. Coutlee, Barrister, who participated in the capture of Louis Riel and who served in the Fenian Raids of 1886.

THE BILLINGS ESTATE

The City of Ottawa has extended an invitation to the public to visit the Billings Estate weekends from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. through to Labor Day.

The interior of the house is still out-of-bounds due to "work in progress", however, guides are on hand to show you the grounds and historic photographs of the old buildings and the graveyard.

Further information is available by phoning 563-3115.
